Herbal Safety Guidelines

Before using an herb you are unfamiliar with, find out its medicinal properties. Research it thoroughly and/or consult with an appropriate health care provider. If you are taking prescription drugs, or have a medical condition, check with an appropriately qualified practitioner before using herbs for health purposes. According to product dosage and other instructions. For example, consuming a greater amount than the recommended dosage may cause adverse effects. Different constitutions, sensitivities, allergic reactions and possible health conditions. The following are some guidelines for using herbs.

Should I check with my doctor or healthcare provider before using a supplement?

This is a good idea, especially for certain population groups. Dietary supplements may not be risk-free under certain circumstances. If you have a medical condition, such as, diabetes, hypertension or heart disease, be sure to consult your doctor or pharmacist before purchasing dietary supplements. Although dietary supplements are widely used and generally considered safe, you may wish to check with your doctor or pharmacist before taking a dietary supplement in place of drugs or in combination with any drug, tell your health care provider first. Many supplements contain herbs and their safety is not always assured in all users. If you have certain health conditions and take these products, you may be placing yourself at risk.

Some supplements may interact with prescription and over-the-counter medicines.

Taking a combination of supplements or using these products together with medications (whether prescription or OTC drugs) could result in adverse effects. Be alert to advisories about these products, whether taken alone or in combination. For example: Coumadin (a prescription medicine) and vitamin E (a vitamin supplement) can each thin the blood, and taking any of these products together can increase the potential for bleeding. Consult your health care provider about any possible adverse interactive effects involving supplements and medications that you may be taking.

Some supplements can have unwanted effects during surgery.

It is important to fully inform your doctor about the vitamins, minerals, herbals or any other supplements you are taking, especially if you are having surgery. Stop taking these products at least 2-3 weeks ahead of the procedure to avoid potentially dangerous supplement/drug interactions -- such as blood thinning -- that could adversely affect the outcome of your surgery.
